NOANK

The trolley situation is the cause of much discussion in the village at present. It is rumored that the Groton and Westerly line will be discontinued soon and if this rumor should be true Noank would suffer greatly and many of its present population would have to move away to be near towns where they are now employed, going to and from work by trolley.

Mrs. A. S. Peckham spent a few days with relatives in Willimantic recently.

Two or three warm, sunny days, followed by two days of rain and fog, have decreased wonderfully the snow and ice with which the ground was covered. The water has poured in torrents down the hillsides and slopes to the river, which has swollen beyond its borders. There is much ice remaining that is so hard the water seems to have little effect upon it. All will be glad to have it go and for spring to come.

MANDATES ALLOCATED BY PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE

London, March 15.—David Lloyd George, the British prime minister, today in the house of commons announced that the following mandates had been allocated:

German East Africa to Great Britain and Belgium; German Southwest Africa to the Union of South Africa; German possessions in the Pacific Ocean south of the equator, other than Samoa, to the commonwealth of Australia; Samoa to New Zealand and the German islands north of the equator to Japan.

The case is mentioned merely as an indication of the lack of perception upon the part of the discredited leadership of the opposition.

No one here in Danielson questions the right of any man to oppose or favor the schoolhouse appropriation for Goodyear according to the dictates of his judgment and conscience. There is sound to be in a honest difference of opinion on all such public matters.

The protest from Danielson's business men on Monday was because one who depends chiefly upon them for support is working without regard to facts or truth for a program that not only will injure them, but every property owner and wage earner in Killingly.

If Goodyear grows, all of Killingly benefits. If Goodyear is turned down by the voters, the great company developing there can easily abandon its development plans and select a town where it can find a more favorable market.

The waters of the swirling, roaring Quinebaug had receded somewhat Monday morning and the danger of a disastrous flood averted at least for the time being.

The quick freeze-up, following Friday and Saturday's rain, proved the salvation of all the towns along the stream from the experience of a flood, and on Monday the mills, using all the water possible for power, were helping lessen a danger that has been worried over for weeks.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The following statement as to Killingly's revenue from the state toward the support of its town schools, and as having a bearing on the matter of the Goodyear schoolhouse appropriation, was given out Monday by one of Killingly's officials. The town of Killingly received from the state treasury for the support of schools in 1919 the sum of $4,196.15.

An effort to prevent an appropriation for a school building at Goodyear and thereby hinder the development of the Goodyear Mills company's plans for a village of 8,000 people and all the attendant prosperity that such a growth would mean to all of Killingly was being made here Monday in an insidious way, and to boost along the opposition stories without a grain of truth or foundation in fact were being circulated to confuse the taxpayers.

The deliberate lie that Killingly would be called upon to stand for an increase in the tax rate to 36 mills was being told to score of Killingly's citizens in an effort to induce them to vote themselves out of such a chance for real prosperity as a few Connecticut towns are enjoying.

Now, the fact is that if the voters of Killingly decide to vote for an appropriation at this afternoon's special town meeting, for the purpose of erecting a school building at Goodyear, the money so appropriated will not have to be raised during the coming year. Any Connecticut town is charged only with the obligation of taxing to meet its current expenses. An appropriation for a school building can be provided for by a bond issue, and the liquidation of such an issue can be spread over 10, 20 or 30 years, as the taxpayer's elect, this on the word of one of Killingly's business men.

The opposition to the appropriation is chiefly inspired by maliciousness on the part of the most active of those who are engaged in the sale of propaganda, though it is not to be denied that a very few persons are honestly opposing the appropriation for reasons that are perfectly sincere and tenable.

Danielson's business men, as they were interviewed Monday, were practically a unit in their desire to support the appropriation that will develop the Goodyear Mills company and not be hampered or abandoned, as may be the result of preventing an appropriation. And if it is abandoned, the taxpayer practically every citizen in Killingly will suffer losses, directly or indirectly, that will amount to heart-breaking heights as the years go by.

The Goodyear company stands ready to spend more than $30,000 as its share of the building program. This in itself is an evidence of the company's fair dealing with the town to which its growth means so much.

As indicative of the magnitude and smallness to which the project for Killingly's development is being attacked it may be cited that the story is being told with every evidence of honesty, that "the Goodyear company is trying to get the taxpayers to build them a moving picture hall as a part of the school house program."

No one knows better than those who are spreading that story that it is as the tales of a Juggler. If Killingly votes an appropriation for such a school building as is desired and proposed for Goodyear—a building with an auditorium, even though the Goodyear company pays $30,000, or half as much toward its construction, the control of the building for all time to come, will be exclusively in the hands of the officials of the town and the Goodyear company, nor will there be anything to say about its use or control or maintenance, only as their opinions may be voiced in meetings of the town.

Every one has an equal chance to vote. The Goodyear company's offer to the town is made without any strings attached. It is a real offer. It is adequate school accommodations for an ever increasing number of pupils.

As showing the ridiculous lengths to which malicious opposition to Killingly's development is being carried, cases were cited Monday of officials of the Goodyear company who, as employees of the concern, being called by telephone and asked to oppose the schoolhouse appropriation and the development of Goodyear, had been asked to do the same as asking a man to spoil his prospects of future happiness and prosperity and hand-cup his children's future, and educational facilities are concerned.

The case is mentioned merely as an indication of the lack of perception upon the part of the discredited leadership of the opposition.

The quick freeze-up, following Friday and Saturday's rain, proved the salvation of all the towns along the stream from the experience of a flood, and on Monday the mills, using all the water possible for power, were helping lessen a danger that has been worried over for weeks.

By noon of Monday the water of the Quinebaug river, below the bridge over a Main street and the dam just below it, had fallen approximately two feet from the high level of Sunday morning. This was regarded by those who are anxiously watching the river as splendid, but the worrying period had not passed for them, as hardly any of the heavy ice had started to move out of the stream.

Not one-tenth of one per cent. of the ice in the river has moved out, and the question now is—Will it thaw out gradually or will another rain storm cause it to break up and go out with a rush. Most of this ice is over two feet in thickness. If it goes in the water in great chunks, it is bound to cause untold damage. The town of Goodyear, Danielson and

PUTNAM

G. Harold Gilpatrick, state treasurer, and Archibald Macdonald, senator from the district, are the delegates-at-large from the district to the republican state convention to be held in New Haven next week. The district members of the committee of the convention are: N. Lorne Greig, of Killingly; Archibald Macdonald, of Putnam; and Judge Clarence H. Child, of Woodstock.

Monday was the last day for filing income tax returns and the offices of attorneys in the city were filled with persons lucky enough to have earned sufficient money during the past year to get into the class that has to contribute a part of their earnings to the support of the government. This was indicated on Monday that some income tax returns from Putnam people and people of surrounding towns will not reach the office of the collector of internal revenue in time to meet the requirement of the laws to filing. Returns that were postmarked at Putnam Monday will be regarded as filed in time under the law.

The most important case that has come before the superior court this season is based on the fact that before Judge George E. Hinman in this city (Tuesday) morning. In this suit George Jordan of Danielson, administrator of the estate of his father, the late M. P. Jordan, also formerly of Danielson, is seeking to recover damages of $5,000 from Charles Como, of the town of Plainfield, it is alleged that an automobile of which Como was the owner caused the death of M. P. Jordan, who was in charge of a force of state highway department workers who were employed at Dayville when the accident occurred, during 1918.

The danger from serious damage by floods along the valley of the Quinebaug river seemed to be lessening during Monday. The river has fallen from the high levels that it reached during Sunday, following two days of rain and was well within its banks except in a few low places. Water of the swollen stream raged over Car-rill falls during all of Monday, and the view below the bridge, the chief danger now seems to be from the possibility of a quick breaking up of the ice, which will cause much in the stream above this city.

The bursting of a sprinkler head at the plant of the Manthassett company during the early part of this week, caused a quantity of water that ran about a part of the mill, causing some damage before the flow could be checked.

Striking employees of the Waterman Worsteds company held another meeting Monday. After the meeting a strike said that the meeting was one of the regular assemblies that the strikers have held from time to time, there was no change in the strike situation.

Up to Monday evening there was no sign of activities in Putnam that would tend to forecast the reopening of the trolley line and the resumption of service. An official of the Shore Line company stated last Thursday that it was hoped to get the Putnam trolley line operating again this week, providing some of the ice and snow blocking the tracks disappeared. No one did not during Thursday, Friday and Saturday to clear a new set of the barriers and now the trolley rails are in sight a great part of the line between this city and Danielson as well as toward the Grovesend "ales. Service will have been suspended six weeks when next Wednesday evening arrives.

Except for a very bad stretch along the Grove street front of Grove Street "metery and another had place between the Tewood home and the "dark farm out on Killingly avenue, the state highway to the south was in order condition and more passable on today than it has been at any time since the first of the year. Resumption of heavy trucking service will be possible all the way to Norwich, following three or four days more mild weather. The Chepacet route was reported, too, on Monday as promising to occur up to the end of this week so that getting true through probably will be possible.

The wearing away of the state highways over which there has been travel since the big storm is such as to surprise many who now that the ice is disappearing, can get a look at the highway surface. Between Attawagan and Dayville the road surface is fairly peppered with holes, and the repair bills likely will be the heaviest this state highway department has had to face for a long time.

Herbert Smith continues to improve after a serious illness and was so well Monday that he was able to come down stairs to dinner at his home. team were defeated in the closest game of the year, when the Connecticut Mills were out by the close score of 32-30. The game was a fast, interesting contest, the score saw-sawing all the way until the last whistle. The Connecticut Mills team, playing on their own floor, got away to a twelve point lead. This handicap was quickly overcome by the lighter five, who sent the first half with three points to the good 21-13. This, however, was not sufficient, and the Danielson quintet led by a scant basket at the whistle. One of the features of the game was the shooting of Nelson, the Putnam center, and the all-around work of Woodson, who threw a basket from his knees in his last play.
